Concert, Movies, Dance.

Tomorrow, evening, July 14, promises to be a memorable one in town, when the new building of the Stony Plain Garage is thrown open to the public. Messrs. Webb and Green, the well-known radio experts, have been engaged to put on a radio concert to be broadcasted from the Edmonton headquarters. The Decca Light Co. intend giving a series of moving pictures, which will be greatly appreciated by those who attend. The evening's entertainment will conclude with a dance in Ducholke's Hall, when a first-class orchestra will be in attendance. Do not miss this One Big Night!

Gillespie's on the Main Line.

Work on the long-looked-for spur connecting the tracks of the Grand Trunk with those of the C. N. has at last begun. The siding commences at the west end of the G. T. yard limit, hitting across the corner of the old storage building, to near the oil tanks. The old building will be demolished to make room for the improvement. This will give the Gillespie Elevator Co. and the new elevator access to the National's main line.

Stony Plain Town Council.

Town Council met Thursday evening, 8th inst., with the Mayor, and Councillors Oatway, Ambruster, Lord and Oppertshanser present.

Several applications for restaurant licenses were received, and these were passed on favorably.

The sale of a piece of property owned by the Town, lot 9, block 10, for $200, was ratified.

An extension of time was given tenderers for the construction of the underground water tank.

Considerable discussion took place on the question of the rent to be charged for the use of the booths at the Fair Grounds, and it was finally decided that the charge be $25 for the refreshment stall and $15 for the eating department.

A delegation representing a concern wishing to install a lighting plant for private users and street lighting purposes, was then heard. After the spokesman had given his views, the delegation was asked to send a concrete proposal to the Council, when it will be given due consideration.

The tax rate for the current year was struck. With the Supplementary Revenue tax, this will be approximately 35c on the $.

A number of bills were passed and ordered paid, after which the Council adjourned.

It is probable a special meeting will be called, for the purpose of considering tenders for building the water tank.

Don't Push

Reports from all parts of Western Canada are at the time this article is written, distinctly optimistic so far as crop conditions are concerned. The heavy spring rains, while they retarded seeding operations in some districts, and resulted in certain low-lying lands not being seeded, nevertheless prepared an ideal seed bed. Then, during the latter part of June copious rains have fallen fairly generally throughout the West, giving the growing grain sturdy development and providing needed moisture for rapid growth.

Sections of the country which during recent years have been afflicted with the grasshopper plague report a marked decrease in the pest, while never before have farmers generally been so well organized and ready to fight this danger.

Reductions in freight rates, and the passing of legislation calculated to assist in the marketing of the crop without such a disastrous decline in prices as took place last year, are also encouraging features of the situation, leading to the hope that, providing the crop passes through the dangers still ahead, a reasonably profitable return on the season's operations will be realized.

It is never wise, however, to figure on a crop until it is actually harvested and marketed because so many eventualities may occur, and so many factors have to be considered. Chickens should not be counted before they are hatched, and neither should the probabilities of the Western grain crop be figured on until they become actualities.

Evidence is not lacking even at this early date that some creditors and corporations, to whom farmers are largely in debt, are figuring on and preparing for what they term a "clean up" this year. In other words, they are planning to conduct aggressive debt-collecting campaigns. In some few isolated cases steps have already been taken to effect foreclosure of mortgages on the strength of growing crops, and without giving the individual farmer an opportunity to himself realize on his year's labor and thus place himself in a position to meet his liabilities to the extent that the crop may place him in funds to do so.

The fact ought to be, and must be, realized that in those sections which have suffered from repeated crop failures in recent years one crop will not liquidate the debts which have been contracted. It has taken several years' losses to put many farmers in the position in which they now unfortunately find themselves, and it would be both foolish and cruel if drastic measures of debt collection were taken. Yet when a man has several creditors it is inevitable that, if one proceeds to take drastic action, the others who are willing to be reasonable must adopt somewhat similar measures in order to protect themselves and not allow the unreasonable creditor to get away with everything to their own and their client's loss.

In a few isolated cases it has already been necessary for Governments to warn unreasonable creditors that, if they persist in demanding their pound of flesh without giving the debtor farmer a fair chance, an individual moratorium will be issued to protect such a man and his other creditors. Should this Shylock characteristic become at all general, Governments might be forced, much as they would regret the necessity, to declare a moratorium in order to prevent the precipitation of a situation which would prove disastrous all round.

On the other hand it must be fully recognized that there is an unwieldy burden of debt now resting on the country which must be paid off to the last dollar it is possible to squeeze out of this year's production and yet leave sufficient to enable families to enjoy the necessities of life and continue to "carry on" next year. The whole credit system of the country, and the stability of the entire financial and business fabric demands that this be done. There can be no sympathy for the little man who does not deal frankly and honestly with his creditors, and make every possible effort to pay off his liabilities.

There is, therefore, imperative necessity for mutual understanding, goodwill and active co-operation between debtors and creditors this year. There must be no tendency on the part of the debtor to evade or procrastinate, but an open, honest effort to meet his creditors more than half-way and fairly to the full extent of his ability. Creditors, on the other hand, must appreciate the fact that one good crop will not pay for three, four and sometimes five years of no crops. They must, therefore, be reasonable and those who refuse to be reasonable must be taken in hand and compelled to be so.

The national interest demands not merely an appreciation of these things, but a practical recognition of them. National interests are paramount, and above any individual or corporation interest, and if the latter do not of their volition conduct themselves as the national interest demands, well, then they must be made to do so.

More than 7,000 pounds of pure gold, says an authority, are required each year to supply the wedding rings for our brides.

OVERWORKED NERVES

The Most Successful Treatment is Through the Blood

The early stages of nervous debility are noted by restlessness and irritability in which the victims seem to be oppressed by their nerves. As the trouble advances, common symptoms are a tired feeling; weakness in the knees and ankles; headaches, back-aches and sleeplessness. The matter requires immediate attention, for nothing but suitable treatment will prevent a complete breakdown.

The nervous system governs the whole body, controlling the heart, lungs, digestion and brain, so that it is not surprising that nervous disturbances cause acute distress. For cures of this kind Dr. Williams' Pink Pills succeed when other treatment fails, for these pills make new blood, enriched with the elements on which the nerves thrive, and in this way reach the root of the trouble. In proof of this is the statement of Mrs. Dokerill, Stratford, Ont., who says:—"My daughter, Matilda, was suffering from nervous debility, and the usual remedies did not seem to help her. I was advised by a friend to give Dr. Williams' Pink Pills a trial, and soon we found they were doing her a great deal of good. She complains of pains in the stomach, and a severe fluttering of the heart with a general weakness. Under the use of these pills she continued to gain, and I believe they have saved her from going to the hospital."

You can get these Pills from any medicine dealer or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

About Advertising

To Be Effective It Must Be Persistent

The Montreal Star makes an interesting and pointed business remark when it declares that "January's advertising helps June and June's will help December."

There is a world of truth, reason and significance in this playfulness and a little reflection will prove why this is so. Effective advertising must not be spasmodic but must be persistent. To hope for instant and sustained results from one or two advertisements is to expect the impossible—as is as though one hoped by attending school a day or two every six months to become an educated man. The one is as absurd as the other.

The wise advertiser is he who advertises regularly week in and week out and regards his initial advertising as the builder regards his foundation—a basis for the permanent superstructure that is to rise later.—Kingston Standard.

Canadians East And West Have Launched Campaign For More Tree Planting

Throughout Canada the greatest activity and enthusiasm has prevailed this year in regard to forest tree planting. It is safe to say that more trees have been planted in the spring of 1922 than in any previous spring in the history of Canada. In the eastern provinces and on the prairies, the cities, towns and villages have planted trees by the thousands along the streets, and in the parks, and where provincial highways have been constructed trees have been planted along these under a systematized plan. These are all shade and ornamental trees and they are planted for aesthetic rather than economic reasons. At the same time work on the prairies, especially the planting of trees in urban centres helps along the movement in rural districts. But the movement has not ended there. In addition to the five or six million trees sent out by the Indian Head and Saskatoon Dominion Forest Nursery Stations to farmers to plant shelter-belts all over the prairies and those sent out for like purposes and to restore woodlots from the Ontario and Quebec Nursery Stations at St. Williams and Berthierville, respectively, there has been a much larger planting and seeding of purely forest trees than ever before. The Dominion Government Forestry Branch has planted trees at Petawawa, Ontario, forest experiment station and on a number of its forest reserves in the prairie provinces to a total number of about 150,000; several of the big pulp and lumber companies have done considerable planting, and there has been a forward movement in the municipal forest plantations in Quebec and Ontario. In the latter province the scheme of county and township forests devised last year was put into active operation. In Simcoe county the first tree in the county forest plot of one thousand acres, near Camp Borden, was planted by the warden with appropriate ceremony. It is expected the whole plot will be planted in ten years. In the same county two townships and one village planted plots of ten acres each, and in Norfolk county twenty thousand seedlings as a beginning were planted on the municipal forest. Other townships set out trees and the counties of York, Ontario, and Durham, are laying out nurseries and getting ready to start next year.

Chinese Are Born Gamblers

Has Fascination For Even the Wealthiest of Orientals.
Penang, in the British Straits Settlements, which was visited by the Prince of Wales on his eastern tour, is famous throughout the east for its luxuriant beauty. writes Richard Curle in the Daily Mail. Other townships set out trees and the counties of York, Ontario, and Durham, are laying out nurseries and getting ready to start next year.

When a Chinese in the Straits becomes wealthy, when from a coolie he rises to a towkay (an influential person) his first desire is to have a residence worthy of his prosperity. He may very probably inhabit only one of the rooms, but there it is for all to see, and there it is for the few important social engagements of the year.

He likes bright colors and fantastic designs. And, somehow, in the glowing sumptuousness of the tropics these lives of his harmonize quite well with the surroundings.

The Chinese is a born gambler. From obscure beginnings many a Straits Chinese has grown immensely rich, and then again has sunk into poverty.

It is seldom that a Chinese will "sell out" and invest his money safely. Even when he has made a fortune he continues to gamble.

Bogey of German Menace

Stands in Way of Prosperity Says Lord Beaverbrook

Lord Beaverbrook, the principal guest at a luncheon given by the London Commercial Club said he was glad to see, though some of them had been predicting the approach of prosperity for weeks past, that now they found themselves supported by many public men, including the President of the Board of Trade.

He knew of only one impediment which stood in the way, and that was a bogey man. "It was, as it used to be, the German menace. Before the war the German menace was of an industrial character. They were going to deprive us of our industry; they were going to take from us our markets. How were we going to be destroyed by the collapse and ruin of Germany? German finance was running through a mad period of inflation, which he prophesied would lead to a crash, which must involve repudiation, before we saw conditions resuming their normal state of affairs. Our public men were concerning themselves about the restoration of conditions in Central Europe, while near at home, over the Irish Channel, lay a market buying from us 200 millions a year for more than ten times the goods we sold to Germany. Let them turn away from Central Europe to where the light of dawning prosperity was beginning to fertilize the fields of England, Scotland and Ireland, of Australia, Canada, America, and other foreign markets, where British commerce and industry would prosper even though there was no real awakening in Central Europe.

Testing Varieties of Grains

Important Work in the Interest of Agriculture

It is an idea of the extent and importance of the work in the interest of agriculture carried on under the Experimental Farm system of the Dominion Department of Agriculture can only be obtained by a study of the reports of the twenty-one different farms and stations, the dozen or so sub-stations, and the eighty illustration stations, of which the farm at Ottawa is the controlling center. One of these reports that has recently made its appearance is that of the Dominion Cereals, for 1921. In that year, Dr. Saunders states, there were 716 plots of all sizes at Ottawa, representing 469 local varieties of grains. Detailed tables are given of the result of the tests made in 1921. Numerous cross-bred sorts which have not yet been named and are in a preliminary state, are omitted. Of these, 112 were of varieties of spring wheat; seven of summer wheat; 27 of oats; 102 of barley; five of spring rye; 29 of field peas; 14 of field beans; 137 of flax; and 18 of barley for hay. In addition, 629 varieties of grain were under test for the Dominion Cerealist at the different farms and stations located in all parts of the country. Experiments for the control of smut were carried on last year, and 30,000 distributions of free seed samples were made, consisting of 3,230 samples of oats, 2,696 of wheat, 3,085 of barley, 552 of flax, 545 of beans and 1,462 of peas.

How Fires Start

One of the most frequent forms of involuntary incendiarism known is the way thoughtless individuals—generally smokers—throw away matches without taking the simple precaution of blowing them out, and assuring themselves that they are extinguished—a matter of a second or two, although they were perfectly willing to spend fifteen seconds' time in lighting the match and lighting the tobacco. This careless practice is universally prevalent throughout the country. Deputy Fire Marshal Lewis, Ontario.

Settlers Come to Canada

During the month of May there entered the western provinces via ports in the western district, 1,939 settlers from the United States. Of these 447 were farmers and 454 were women and children, nearly all being the wives and families of farmers. They brought with them $277,000 in money and effects valued at $46,204.

Britain's Civilization

Future Generations Will Still Find Empire Going Strong

Dean Inge thinks that the Victorian age saw the culmination of English civilization. "The twentieth century," he said in his Cambridge lecture, "will doubtless be full of interest, and may even develop some elements of greatness. But as regards the fortunes of this country, the signs are that our work on a grand scale, with the whole world as our stage is probably nearing its end. Europe has sacrificed its best five years of prime age by an insane and suicidal struggle. American has emerged as the tertius maximus."

As the opening and development of the Atlantic trade favored England, so now, the Dean thinks, "the Pacific stage, which is now beginning, must inevitably give the primacy to America. "Where," he asks, "shall we (the English) be thirty years hence?" Since the good but gloomy Dean Inge, our surmises is that another generation will still find the British going strong in all parts of the earth and active in commerce and government. The United States, as he suggests, is better situated for the Pacific trade than the United Kingdom, but Canada reaches to the Pacific. Australia and New Zealand have every access to it. South Africa borders on it, and the Suez Canal is still open. The British Empire is not without facilities for doing business in the new era.

Have the British races declined in vigor or ability?

The Kaiser thought they had, and bet on it, but he lost his wager.

They say that deep plowing by shells has increased the fertility of certain fields in France, with resulting crops that are unprecedented. The war has plowed England very deep. Her coming leadership may derive from lower social strata, than she has drawn on heretofore, but there is nothing necessarily ominous about that. The racial stuff is there. —E. S. M., in Life, New York

Mr. Wombat Travels From Australia to the End-of-the-Earth.

O you know what a Wombat is? It was a long way for Mr. Wombat to travel from Australia to the End-of-the-Earth, but as he wanted to see Stella, the Wishing Fairy, he didn't care how long the trip was or how tired he grew. By the time he reached the Get Little Pool he was so thirsty that he drank and drank, before he realized it he had drunk the whole pool, which made the four Brownies awfully angry.

They were jumping excitedly around the edge of the pool, begging him to stop drinking, but Mr. Wombat was enjoying himself so much that he never even noticed them.

"The Brownies were furious!" They had to get their seashell buckets (that Stella had given them), and Stella's cousin, had once seen her for a birthday present) and fetch enough water to refill the empty pool. The Wombat became very little after having lapped up the whole Get Little Pool, and he was still licking his lips when Stella happened to walk toward him.

"Are you the Wishing Fairy?" he called to her. "Yes," she said, "did you come to see me?" "Yes, indeed," Mr. Wombat happily exclaimed as he edged yet closer to her.

"Have you a wish?" she asked. "Well," was the slow answer, "to be quite truthful, I didn't when I first arrived. I only came to see you because I had heard so much about you and your Brownies that I wanted to know you; but since I've been here I find that I have two wishes and I want them both to come true—I want them ever so much!"

"And what are they?" the little Fairy gently asked. "One is that after my visit I may suddenly find myself home. I mean by that," he added, "that I shall not have to travel and travel all that tremendous distance back to Australia. I had a awful time getting here!"

Stella smiled, for the little fellow certainly looked exhausted, and then quite suddenly she began winking her magic wand. "When the proper time comes," she said, "and you wish to be home, you will suddenly and in the shortest way find yourself there. And your other wish, what is it?"

"I want you to make me grow back to the same size that I always was until I drank from that exceedingly strange pool of yours."

"You mean, until you drink it all up?" exclaimed Pimble indignantly, for he had overheard what Mr. Wombat had said.

"All you have to do," Stella explained, "is to drink some water from the Get Big Pool. You will find it just opposite the other pool, near the entrance to the End-of-the-Earth."

"But you go to the End-of-the-Earth, and Stella's cousin, had once seen her for a birthday present) and fetch enough water to refill the empty pool. The Wombat became very little after having lapped up the whole Get Little Pool, and he was still licking his lips when Stella happened to walk toward him.

"I suppose I'm really a tiny Bear, was the answer. "Now I am doubly related to them; but then, I'm also a relation of the little fellow, so you see, I can't answer your question in a very satisfactory way. I can tell you that I only like to run around and eat berries and roots and berries, and that when I'm angry all I can do is to hiss and growl."

Pimble gave him a look of disgust and walked away, leaving Mr. Wombat alone with the Fairy.

Greenland Has Assumed Considerable Importance As A Commercial Country

Forgeries Reining

Egyptian Market

Collectors of Antiques Afraid to Buy Historical Treasures

"The manufacture of antiques is carried forward on such an extensive scale in Egypt particularly at Cairo, that it now has a place in reports on the industries of the country," says Professor Flinders Petrie, the famous Egyptian archaeologist in an interview in the Daily Chronicle.

The forging of Egyptian antiques are often so well executed, he states, that even the most experienced collectors are deceived by them. Large sums of money have been paid for articles that were considered genuine treasures but have now been pronounced spurious or of doubtful origin. So strong is the suspicion concerning the authenticity of scarabs and various bronzes and gold ornaments and other articles alleged to have been found in Egypt, that many collectors are afraid to risk buying them, and in an excess of caution often turn down antiquities that are undoubtedly genuine. Thus the forgeries have largely ruined the market for Egyptian historical treasures.

Marketing Seed Wheat

Alberta Has Comprehensive Plan for Marketing Pure Seed

Plans are completed here by officials of the Alberta Provincial Department of Agriculture and Alberta Agricultural College in cooperation with the Dominion Seed Branch, for a comprehensive scheme for marketing seed wheat, oats and barley. Pure seed will be distributed to select growers and the seed products from this will be inspected by the Dominion Government seed officials. The marketing of the seed will be handled by the Provincial Government.

Will Greenland become a great commercial centre and a port of call for travellers between Europe and America?

This is the romantic possibility that is opened up by the proposal to use Greenland as a half-way house in mid-Atlantic in the round-the-world flight.

Ten or twenty years ago the suggestion that Greenland might become a place of real importance in the world's life would have been laughed to scorn; but already the great blank land in the north, hitherto regarded as a mere field some where near the North Pole, is being spoken of as a country about which the nations may as well concern themselves.

It used to be thought of little practical importance whether this country or that claimed rights over Greenland, though since 1721 it has been a Danish colony with traders and officials representing the Government of Denmark.

Now, however, with all kinds of commercial possibilities opening up, the rights over Greenland have assumed considerable importance, and already Denmark and Norway have been in dispute with regard to them. The King of Denmark, too, has thought it worth while to visit the country—the first time in history that a ruling monarch has ever been to Greenland.

The country is really an island—the largest in the world if Australia is regarded as a continent—and it contains over half a million square miles, of which about three-fifths in the interior are covered with a vast glacier.

Round the coast, however, the land is quite habitable, and there are about two hundred small towns and settlements, including the capitals, Godthaab and Godhavn.

Many valuable animals and birds are found on the island, the reindeer and musk-ox providing food, and the polar bear, wolf, fox and hare yielding warm skins. Over sixty kinds of birds nest there, and over three hundred kinds of plants are found. Broccoli, spinach, radishes, lettuce, turnips and leeks are grown; and in the south, rhubarb, ripens and potatoes grow to a useful size. The whaling industry, with the preparation of blubber, has long been a valuable asset of the country, and now there is some prospect of minerals being worked there on a large scale. Graphite is abundant, soapstone is found in considerable quantities, copper has been discovered at various places, and there is coal near the northern capital and elsewhere.

But the most valuable mineral is cryolite, which is found exclusively in Greenland. It is a colorless substance something like ice in appearance, and is an ore of aluminum. At one time this was the only source of the metal, but now aluminum is also extracted from bauxite. Cryolite is used extensively in the making of opal glass and iron enamel, and it all comes from Greenland. Commercial men are anxious to develop a country which promises so well.

A town with large hotels and stores of the various kinds needed in Atlantic flying is quite possible in the south of Greenland, and the country might become a regular holiday resort for tourists.

It is a fascinating prospect for what used to be regarded as a valueless No-man's Land. Things have developed remarkably in recent years, and already the Eskimos have their parliament and municipal councils, their law courts and churches, and their newspaper.

VIII.
Fluke Farm, Elba,
June 28th, 19—

It is a week to day since I came here, and I can truly say that I am having a "real good time." My only troubles are that I want to eat everything in sight, and that I am too sleepy by half-past nine to do any writing. My early sleepiness is the direct result of early rising. The day begins for us at the barbarous hour of five-thirty, except on wash-day, when we celebrate by making it five o'clock sharp.

I hope you remark the editorial "we." I am beginning to feel as if I had a part interest in the farm, for in accordance with my wish, I am not being used as a visitor but as one of the family.

On Monday we wash, and make bread. Tuesday, we iron, and make butter. Wednesday is a "dull" day. Thursday, we make bread. Friday, we make butter, and sweep and dust the whole house. Saturday, we prepare for Sunday—that means that we bake pies and cake enough to feed a regiment, for the Flukes keep open house on Sunday.

Like the comic supplement orator, I can point with pride in my share in each of these tasks. Mrs. Fluke, model housewife that she is, went so far as to tell her husband that she never saw another English girl who was "so handy."

I helped with the washing, and to-day I covered myself with glory by ironing some beautiful embroidery as well as Mrs. Fluke herself could have done it.

On churning day I haunt the dairy, a lovely cool stone building, with an earthen floor. I turned the churn for a while, but found the task rather too signious to please me, so my dairying activities are principally confined to drinking unlimited quantities of buttermilk and making the fresh butter into little cakes for the table. To do the latter I use a wooden mould on which is carved a sheaf of wheat—I have not had so good a time since I used to make mud pies.

I always did love to putter around in the kitchen, so on Saturday I was able to win more laurels by making some real English pastry and two big pans of toffee. Of course I turned my arm on the oven door, and the kitchen table was a sight to behold when I finished; but my guardian angel must have taken a course in Domestic Science at some time. Each of my ventures has proved successful. I had a try to look as if such a result is quite what I expected; I am not going to admit that I am not always so lucky.

For amusement Gypsy and I weed the snail bed, hunt for wild strawberries, and last, but not least amusing, go to the hen-house to look for eggs. Gypsy has a genuine Red-liding Hood basket which she has used to carry eggs in ever since she was big enough to hold it. I use the pocket of a big gingham apron. I had a thrilling experience the very first day. I had found six eggs, and as I went to take the seventh out of a nest a miserable old sufragee flew off the perch, and screaming "Help! Robbers! Police!" landed almost on top of me. Of course I jumped, and dropped the eggs, which made themselves into an impressive omelette. And Gypsy, all this time, was leaning against the door, and laughing until the tears rolled down her cheeks. She has such a jolly, gurgling laugh, the sort one hears from a well-bred baby.

Then we visit the horses regularly, and the calves, and the pigs. Mr. Fluke has eight teams of farm horses and a carriage team. The latter are broodmares, "Imp" and "Pixie." Mr. Fluke brought them from my late coachman Mr. Livingston, and they are branded with the mark "B," which is read "Bar B."

The manager is completed by two dogs, a thoroughbred collie "Mac" and a mongrel bull-terrier "Cop," and a cat named "Puss." On Saturday, after my toffee had cooled, Mrs. Fluke and Gypsy and I took a walk of it and went across the fields to call on John Fluke, Junior, his wife, and most important of all, John Fluke, the third. This young man is two plus and when I made his acquaintance he was clad in blue overalls and a hat the exact miniature of the one usually worn by his grandfather. Young Mrs. Fluke is very kind, and her home is so comfortable in its simplicity and good taste greatly to be preferred to the parental manor. The house is small, but I do not believe that one could find a ribbon bow in it if one looked from ceiling to floor. The house is neat, and the farmer (the prayers of the congregation are desired—for the farmer). I should wish my home to be like "Flukehouse."

I do not think that I have mentioned before that the original Fluke house is still in existence. It is very small, built of logs, and white-washed, and with its crumpled rooflines and vines it looks like the enchanted house in a fairy tale.

Many of the folks around uses their old houses for a granary or hen-house, but I couldn't bring myself to spoil the place an' an' John fixed up when we were young," said Mr. Fluke, almost apologetically as she pointed it out to me. There is evidently a strain of sentiment in her.

Sunday morning we went to the Methodist service, which is held in the nearest school. Gypsy, Fred and I went in the motor-car, and Mr. and Mrs. Fluke drove Imp and Pixie. The school was well filled, and the people were very reverent, but I missed the proper atmosphere. Perhaps we Churchpeople are too dependent on atmosphere—but how is one to appreciate properly a sermon on the Prodigal Son when from one's blank board behind the preacher one can read this problem?—

"A monkey climbs a pole ten feet high at the rate of two feet a minute. But for each two feet he climbs he slips back one foot. How long will it take him to reach the top of the pole?"

The preacher was a theological student, very much in earnest but very youthful. And to disconcert me, his progress was very much like that of the above-mentioned monkey; he kept slipping back from secondly to firstly, and from thirdly to secondly, in a most distracting manner. But I must not criticize.

Mr. and Mrs. Fluke, Junior, were at church, and the little boy John the Third scandalized the staid members of the congregation by a valiant endeavour to join in the singing—between verses. And during a long prayer he got away from his mother and hurried across the room to his grandfather, in whose arms he slept all through the sermon. He has a very suspicious manner when he came out of church; but Mrs. Fluke has her own conception of the respect due to "the cloth," and she insisted that he should drive with her and Mr. Fluke.

"I don't think it's becoming for a person to go strolling around with the young folks on a Sunday, especially in one of them autos," she said to me. "If I had my way, the car would never come out of the garage on Sunday. I was raised to go to church behind a pair of decent horses, an' I can't bring myself to countenance them noisy things."

So the poor young man had to discuss crops and theology with his orthodox grandpa, while the candle to which he played such so transparently wasted—her sweetness on me. There's a mixed metaphor for you!

When we reached the house we found the verandah occupied by the entire staff of the Union Bank. In case you may fear that there would not be dinner enough to go around, I hasten to add that the entire staff consists of two young men who describe themselves as "Teller Up" and "Ledger or Down." Teller Up, who figures on the letter-heads as manager, is a nice Irish boy answering to the delightful name of Dennis O'Hara. Ledger Down is a Canadian, Jack Mills; he is a medical student and is working his way through college without any apparent injury to either his health or his spirits. Twelve of us sat down to dinner—not quite a regiment, but a very fair beginning for one.

Mr. Thompson had to leave us immediately after dinner in order to conduct afternoon service at another "station." Teller Up and Ledger Down—whom I feel like calling Tweedledum and Tweedledee—and when that was done we went for a long walk, coming home just in time to have an early tea before going into Elba for Evenson at St. George's.

It was good to see Mr. Hartford and Mrs. Mills again—I could then old friends. And this time I cannot complain of a lack of church atmosphere.

On the whole Sunday at the Fluke farm was a pleasant and not wholly unprofitable day.

In reviewing my various duties I forgot to mention, particularly the Latin lessons which I give to Gypsy whenever and wherever we can find a place for them. I am learning more than I teach, for Gypsy has an original mind. Our favourite classroom is the hayloft, and the accent the hay must be "mellering to the organ." The first day we studied there the master-official Gypsy waxed confidential and told me her troubles quite freely. It appears that she failed in Latin in her Matriculation exam, and therefore she has to write a supplementary exam. In September before she can go on with the next term's work.

"What's the use of me learning Latin?" she objected vigorously. "It would be more to the point if some body would teach me to talk good English. I can pass a grammar exam, and get fairly good marks; but when I have to write an essay I am all at sea. I read a story once about a young man who didn't know how to use a finger-bowl or a pronoun, and that's Gypsy Fluke right down to the ground. Of course finger-bowls are not what you would call common in these parts, but it's pretty hard to get along without pronouns. And believe me, it's not much use to know

Got No Sleep

But now the neuritis has gone, the pains have ceased, the nervous system is restored and the writer of this letter pays a grateful tribute to the medicine which made him well.

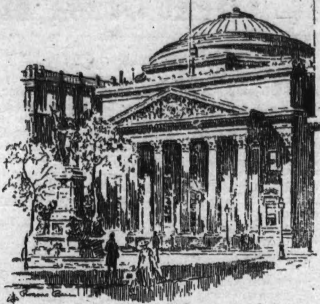

Mr. John Woodward, P.T.O., Lucan, Ont., writes:

"It gives me much pleasure to recommend Dr. Chase's medicine, especially the Nerve Food. I was a sufferer from neuritis for several years, and tried all kinds of remedies, yet never seemed to get any better. At last my nerves and whole system seemed to give way through not being able to get any rest or sleep at night for years, which really used to take me in all parts of the limbs and feet. My nerves would twitch all my whole body would jerk and jerk just as I lay in bed. Almost at the point of despair, I decided I would get Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, which I did, and after taking twenty boxes I believe myself almost normal again. I also keep a box of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills on hand, and for the last year I seem to enjoy my usual health."

What the Act Says.

The Motor Vehicles. Act requires that those who own or drive cars must make use of their horns on specific occasions. The Act says that each owner or driver of a motor car, truck or bicycle upon wanting to pass any other form of vehicle must use the horn.

All bicycles should be equipped with a bell. A newspaper writes the Standard complaining of the neglect of a good many to observe the above regulation and as he is the driver of a team, on two or three occasions at least he has narrowly escaped having a bad smash up and runaway. Cars have dashed past him while on the trail without sounding their horn as warning of approach and the horses have swerved into the ditch. The writer has the number of two such cars whose drivers have violated the act in this respect but he says "I don't want any of these fined, nor do I object to everyone having a car as I intend to own one as soon as I can—but for the sake of public safety I do ask that they exercise the common 'courtesy' provided for by the act."—Vermilion Standard.

CATARHIAL DEAFNESS

Is greatly relieved by constitutional treatment. HALL'S CATARRH MEDICINE is a constitutional remedy. Catarrhial deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed it hinders the free passage of air into the middle ear, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result. Causes, the inflammation can be reduced, your hearing may be restored. HALL'S CATARRH MEDICINE acts through the blood on the mucous surfaces of the Eustachian Tube, thus restoring normal ear conditions. Circulars free. All Druggists, F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio.

RED HOT JULY DAYS HARD ON THE BABY

July—the month of oppressive heat; red hot days and sweltering nights; is extremely hard on little ones. Diarrhoea, dysentery, colic and cholera infantum carry off thousands of precious little lives every summer. The mother must be constantly on her guard to prevent these troubles or if they come on suddenly to fight them. No other medicine is of such aid to mothers during the hot summer as is Baby's Own Tablets. They regulate the bowels and stomach, and an occasional dose will prevent summer complaint, or if the trouble does come on suddenly will banish it. The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

In the open or in the office, this food helps

EXPLORERS and hunters have taken Grape-Nuts as one of their principal foods—because Grape-Nuts contains much nourishment in small bulk.

Office workers find that a breakfast or lunch of Grape-Nuts is much better for them than a heavy, starchy meal—because Grape-Nuts digests easily and wholesomely.

The richness and crispness of Grape-Nuts, that splendid wheat-and-barley food, have a wonderful charm for the taste.

An order to your grocer today will bring this splendid food to you. Ready to eat from the package—add a little cream or milk in the dish.

Lutheran Convention.

From July the 5th to the 11th the annual Synodical Convention of the Lutherans in Alberta and B. C., was in session at Golden Spike. Approximately 60 pastors, missionaries and official lay delegates attended. The President of the Missouri Synod, Rev. Photenhauer, D. D., of Chicago, was present, to represent the General Body. Dean Fritz, Dean of the largest theological seminary on the American continent, at St. Louis, was among the visitors.

Through the Conference, in all doctrinal and practical discussions, one could not but be impressed with the fact that the Lutheran Church, laymen and pastors, still stands four-square on the Bible as the standard of Truth in matters of faith and conduct. The numerous and inspiring missionary reports indicated that the Lutheran Church is in a period of unprecedented expansion, and that it will not allow its sphere of activity to be limited by either language or race. The Lutheran Church is showing itself to be a thoroughly Canadian institution.

The Convention proved again that Lutherans, more than other churches, are conscious of the fact that an education which cultivates the mind and leaves the heart untouched is no education. The convention unqualifiedly endorsed the behavior of the local congregation in establishing a parochial school.

The Lutherans in the Golden Spike Community were unstinting in their hospitality toward the Convention.
